2007 has been a year with lots of changes and excitement. This March, I officially became a home owner. I purchased a small one bedroom, one bath condo in Orlando, FL that gives me a commute to work that is less than 15 minutes. I couldn't be happier and am excited to finally be a homeowner!

Along with the changes in living, I have made several changes with work in the last year. In June, I left the Main Street Operations Team at the Magic Kingdom after two years to join an elite group of Cast Members on what is called the Dream Squad. The Dream Squad are mini-ambassadors for Walt Disney Parks and Resorts and the Disney Dreams Giveaway. Each day I would go to work with the sole purpose of making dreams come true for our guests. Some dreams as small as just talking with a guest to give that insider tip for seeing fireworks to big dreams such as a $500 shopping spree or a night in Cinderella Castle. This was an amazing experience with lots of great memories to last forever. Dream Squad though is not where I will be ending this year.

In late August, I took a role with Disney Destinations based in Celebration, FL as Ticket Fulfillment Coordinator. I work in the corporate office of Walt Disney World Ticketing and help coordinate the production and distribution for Walt Disney World Guest and all Cast Member Complimentary Tickets for the entire Walt Disney Company. This role has given me a chance to experience the side of Disney away from our Guests and has given me a new appreciation for what our Guests mean for our Company and our Cast.

Work aside, I had the opportunity to join Mom, Dad and Tim in a week vacation to Paris, France. I had an amazing time traveling again as a family and even got a chance to see an old friend from my days on Main Street, USA when I visited Disneyland Resort Paris. The museums were fun but I had fun picturing the Da Vinci code while touring several of the landmarks.

Here's to a wonderful and magical 2008!
